Give me your best estimate about the costs of Medicare for all.

My best estimate is that a true, comprehensive Medicare for All program would require roughly $35–45 trillion in additional federal spending over its first 10 years in today's dollars, with a reasonable midpoint around $40 trillion.

Can you keep your private healthcare plan under Bernie Sanders' Medicare for All bill?

No — not in the ordinary sense of keeping your current private health insurance plan. Under Bernie Sanders's Medicare for All legislation, once the program was fully implemented, private insurers would be prohibited from selling insurance that duplicates benefits covered by Medicare for All. Employers likewise could not provide duplicative health benefits. The 2023 bill states this explicitly in Section 107.
